To the Editors:

So the critics of Admiral Turner ask, "Has the CIA Chief gone adrift?" No, but his detractors have. When the shaky Carter Administration is lucky enough to have a man of great personal integrity who is also a Rhodes Scholar with vast accomplishments in his profession, the public should rejoice. To also find a man with the guts to administer a dose of salts to a bogged down and plugged up Federal bureaucracy like the CIA, is a bonus indeed. Many of the Admiral's detractors trying unsuccessfully to scuttle his ship couldn't carry his bags across the quarterdeck!

Sincerely,

This probably won't make the hallowed pages of Time but at least you know some of us care and are trying. I thought you came across with a lot of skill on "Issues and Answers" on Sunday. Keep up the good work and our best personal regards to you and Pat.

Very respectfully,

Bud Kobey
